Kat was born and raised in Alberta, Canada. She practiced law in Canada for two years before moving to California and has practiced law in California since 2002. Kat's practice focuses on healthcare law, including professional negligence defense as well as medical professional advocacy. She also has an interest in assisting acute care facilities with patients with difficult placements, including conservatorships and court petitions to obtain approval for treatment without a conservatorship. Kat recently retired from her volunteer activities in rugby. In an athletic career spanning 28 years, Kat represented Canada as a player in two Women's Rugby World Cups, and also worked as a selector for international referees in the 2014 and 2017 Women's Rugby World Cups. Kat has retired to pursue more local volunteer opportunities.
